MISCELLANEOUS READING THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW. And an infant's idle laughter, The old year went with mourning by,

The new came dancing after; Let Sorrow shed her lonely tear, Let Revelry toss her "ladle," Bring bows of cypress for the bier, Fling roses on the cradle: Mutes to wait on the funeral state!

Pages to pour the wine! And a requiem for fifty-eight, And a health to fifty-nine!

Alas! for human happiness, Alas! for human sorrow; Our yesterday is nothingness, What else will be our morrow? Still beauty must be stealing hearts, And knavery stealing purses,

Cuisiniers live by making tarts,

And wits by making verses; While sages prate and courts debate, The same stars set and shine; And the world as it rolled through fifty-eight, Must roll through fifty-nine!

Some king will come in heaven's good time, To the tomb his father came to; Some rogue will wade through blood and crime, To a crown he has no claim to: Some suffering land will rend in twain

The manacles that bound her, And gather the links of the broken chain To strew them proudly round her: The grand and great will love and hate, And combat and combine; And much as we were in fifty-eight,

We shall be in fifty-nine! ---BURNT OFFERINGS TO THE MOLOCH OF FASHion.-When the poet made one of his ideal characters declare that-"Golden lads and lasses must, As chimney-sweepers, come to dust," it is not supposable that he meant ashes and cinders. Yet do the golden lasses of our own day seem to be too often courting such a fate. Terrible suffering in such cases is certain: recovery is very rare. Hers is considered doubtful. When Clara Webster on the English stage, and Caroline Lehman, of Niblo's, in this city, perished by accidents of this distressing nature, the peril was perhaps thought to be incidental to the profession.
